STATE-AIDED HOUSING FOR THE ELDERLY ANDOVER PROJECT NO. 667-2

CLINTON EDGAR, FIDELITY & BOND ARCHITECT
25 WASHINGTON ST., BOSTON, MASS.

Spring Project

With construction of this 40 unit housing development, Andover will double the number of public housing apartments available here for the elderly. Construction of these units will begin in the spring. They are to be located off Memorial Drive, close by Chestnut Court. The estimated cost: $520,000. The Commonwealth takes care of the necessary financing. The three room apartments include a kitchen, bedroom and living room and will be arranged so that no tenant will need to climb more than one flight of steps to reach his quarters.

News Capsules

• The Florence Street zoning case was argued in Supreme Court this week. Six judges heard the arguments, one more than usually sits for such cases. Town Counsel Frederic S. O'Brien represented the town. The civil suit was brought by residents on the street who have challenged a Town Meeting vote rezoning a portion of a lot on Florence Street as a means of settling a zoning conflict.

• Manager Richard Bowen said this week that he has had a letter from the AFL-CIO union for state, county and municipal employees asking for a meeting to discuss local representation. The manager said he replied that he would schedule a meeting when notified what employees the union represents. The expected reply: public works personnel.

Galbraith Claims US Policy Changing

John Kenneth Galbraith, economist and former US Ambassador to India, told Phillips Academy students last week that this country's foreign policy is undergoing subtle change. He spoke to the student body and faculty as the annual Lobel lecturer.

The topic for the annual lecture was American foreign policy which Galbraith characterized as having proceeded since World War II under a system of "inertial guidance". He pointed out that in post-war years, European countries were bound together by a common fear of an implacably hostile "communist conspiracy" under firm control from Moscow. The assumption of European and American leadership was that if a prosperous and cohesive Western Europe were created a communist takeover could be deterred. This binding fear of communism not only made European countries more anxious to work together for economic security but also led them to look to the United States for leadership and strength, Galbraith explained.

Galbraith then went on to point out that much of our present foreign policy is guided by these same principles, despite the fact that the realities of Europe and communism have changed dramatically. There is no longer a single communist leadership and moreover, the underlying concepts of communism have undergone changes. And in addition, with the accomplishment of a more prosperous Europe, individual countries no longer value a cohesive Europe with Americans in the position of leadership, the economist said. He cited France's withdrawal from the European Community as evidence of this change.

While this committee is in session, teachers for grades kindergarten through six will be meeting with Guidance Director William Igoe to discuss "The Total Testing Program."

These two conferences will be followed by others for teachers at various grade levels who will talk about the Iowa Test of Basic Skills and readiness and reading testing.

Parents serving on the report card study committee, something new, are as follows:

Sanborn: Mrs. Albert Alexander and Mrs. George Turow. West: Mrs. Bruno Wojtkun and Mrs. Daniel Issenberg. South: Mrs. Charles Morehardt and Mrs. Norman Potter. Shawshen: Mrs. Merton Starks

Sixth Grader Is Re-Routed

A Southeast Andover sixth grader is back in school as the result of a compromise between his parents and school authorities. The family notified the school department late in November that it felt adjustments should be made in bus routes to eliminate the need for their three youngsters to cross South Main Street, while the matter was studied, the children were kept at home.

Two junior high students were scheduled for an earlier bus that runs another route, to the satisfaction of the residents.

A sixth grader going to Stowe School could not be accommodated on a direct trip, however, unless a bus was completely re-routed. This was considered impractical. Jack Berberian, supervisor of general services, said Wednesday that the sixth grader is being picked up now by an early morning bus that makes a stop at South School before coming uptown to St. Augustine's and Central. He can catch this bus on his side of the street.

Because St. Augustine's releases pupils in advance of the public school schedule, the same procedure cannot be followed on the afternoon trip, Berberian said. Consequently, the Stowe student is riding the regular route and crossing South Main Street to his home.

The problem arose after the last Special Town Meeting when school officials said South Andover would be redistricted in such a way as to eliminate the need for elementary pupils to cross the South Main Street (Route 28) when the new Southeast school is constructed.

Last year during the month of December 84 persons lost their lives on the highways of the Commonwealth in automobile accidents.

Boiler Is Adjusted At Raytheon

Raytheon Co. said this week it has made boiler adjustments at its Haverhill Street heating plant which should control the soot problem that has plagued some Shawsheen residents in recent weeks.

Further improvements will be undertaken after the current labor strike has ended when a full complement of men will be on hand to adjust a boiler expert with testing equipment. Mrs. Michael Melucci, 30 Main St., told the Selectmen last week that heavy soot has been falling in Shawsheen and she stated that it came from Raytheon's smoke stack.

Meanwhile, the missile manufacturer had set up an appointment with a boiler expert after the referral of complaints previously directed to the Board of Health. Mrs. Melucci is one of two residents who has contacted the town about the soot in recent weeks. Jason Wright of Raytheon Co. Tuesday that the boiler was examined on Thursday and immediate adjustments made. There is staff on hand to fix a second boiler, the prime boiler will be shut down for close examination.

Wright pointed out that the town in question has been in continuous operation since 1922 and has given trouble. The Health Department reports that in 1957 Raytheon spent several thousand dollars on renovations, a redesigned chimney and items which eliminated at that time was a more serious pollution problem.

If a person feels a chill, he should run to the drug store for medication that will ward off a cold.

In olden days, however, said he had a chill, he meant he had already caught the cold. From the 9th to the 14th century, the Anglo-Saxon word for the early Old English was the regular English word for cold.

Then, the word dropped out of use for about 200 years and was replaced by "cold."

Tree Tips

That once-a-year decision-making you do at the Christmas tree lot is pleasant, but not easy when you want to find the ideal tree for your picture window.

Grading experts judge a tree on its shape, density, freshness, cleanliness, and absence of defects. Let these pointers be your guide when choosing a Christmas tree.

Look for a tree with uniform triangular taper. Check to see that it is free of weak, broken, or unduly long branches or crooks in the stem, and that it has a well filled-out appearance.

Shake, or bounce the tree on the ground lightly, to see that the needles are firmly attached. If only a few needles drop, the tree is fresh and more likely to retain its needles throughout the holiday season in your house.

Once home, saw off the butt end of the tree - about an inch or so above the original cut - so it can absorb water and stay fresh longer.

To prevent your tree from drying out and becoming a fire hazard, stand it in water and store it in a cool, shady place, preferably outside, until time to decorate. Leave it in water even after you decorate it, and locate it away from radiators, fireplace, TV set, or other heat sources.

Garden Group Meets Today

Four new members will be welcomed into the Four Seasons Garden Club when it meets this morning at 9:30 a.m. at the home of the club president, Doris Oldaker.

Joining Barbara Swift, who was welcomed as a new member at the November meeting, will be Esther Moomjian, Nancy Gump, Jennie Mansour and Dorothy McCarthy. Alice Holmes, conservation chairman, will introduce the monthly speaker, Mrs. Waters Kellogg, who will speak on "Birds in Your Garden."

Santa Visiting West Andover

Santa Claus will come to a Christmas Party being arranged for Dec. 18 by the West Andover Community Assn. for the children of its members.

He will arrive at the community center on River Road at 2 p.m., bearing gifts.

During the afternoon, women of the association will serve refreshments to families attending.

Mrs. Roger LaFrande is chairman of the committee for arrangements. Working with her are Mrs. Charles Barr, Mrs. Lionel Strolis, Mrs. Alfred Contarino, Mrs. Wilfred Robidoux, Mrs. Philip Hale and Mrs. Chester Whitney.

Parents bringing children to the party are asked to bring an equal number of small gifts for Santa's pack.

December days are the shortest of the year which means much more driving is done during hours of dusk and darkness. Check your vehicle lights. Use your sun visors in late afternoon. Cut your speed after dark. Help minimize traffic dangers. This advice comes from the Registry of Motor Vehicles.

Award Given Mt. Greylock Campaighner

The Massachusetts Audubon Society has awarded its special citation for conservation service to William H. Tague of Williamstown for his successful defense of Mt. Greylock. This award has been given only two other times in the past 10 years, once to an Andover conservationist.

Tague received his citation at the society's annual dinner last week for organizing and directing the Mt. Greylock Protective Assn. which led a successful campaign to abolish the Greylock Tramway Authority and transfer the reservation to the Department of Natural Resources.

Harold Rafton of Andover led a similar fight in 1960-61, preventing development of Den Rock Park in Lawrence for industry for which he received the Audubon Award in 1962. He and his supporters stopped action on legislation which would have legalized use of Den Rock's park land for development.

More recently, Rafton protested when it was learned that the City of Lawrence was using the park for dumping purposes. Such use of park land was subsequently ruled illegal.

Rafton is active with the Andover Village Improvement Society, a conservation organization.

Companies Expect Profits To Shrink

Lower profit margins are expected next year by a majority of company presidents polled recently by Northeastern University.

This is the business outlook revealed by the survey conducted bi-monthly by Northeastern's Bureau of Business and Economic Research. The survey results are published in the Bureau's "Business Topics," which appears bi-monthly.

The survey is a poll of about 500 company presidents, half from New England and half from throughout the United States.

While those polled are not particularly pessimistic about the general business outlook, a majority of them anticipate a profit squeeze in their own industries. The survey showed 74 percent of the New Englanders and 61 percent of the non-New Englanders anticipate lower profit margins in 1967 than they enjoyed in 1966.

In addition, another 17 percent from New England and 34 percent of the others see a profit squeeze as at least a "50-50" probability, while only eight percent from New England and five percent of the others hope to maintain or improve their profit margin next year.

The survey further showed that while the elimination of the seven percent investment tax credit would automatically cause after-tax profits margins to decline in most cases, its elimination has apparently had little effect on capital expenditure plans so far.

The present business boom, now in its sixth year, started with the demand for consumer goods, particularly autos; advanced to rapid expansion of plant and equipment spending and is now being supported by defense spending to such a degree many producers are hard pressed to meet delivery schedules.

Another factor given for the anticipated profit squeeze in 1967 is that contracts involving more than two million workers come up for re-negotiations and it is felt the economic climate is hardly ideal for amicable, non-inflationary wage agreements.

While most businessmen will admit wages have lagged behind profits in recent years, management may not be in a position to be too generous in 1967.

Recent surveys show profit margins in manufacturing have already started to level off and as N.U.'s survey indicates, will probably decline even more next year. Recent sharp declines in earnings reported by the big three auto producers probably is an indication of the future.

As a result, business may be about to enter another period of profitless prosperity not unlike that of the late 1950's when profits did not keep pace with the gross national income.

On Exhibit

For nearly 2000 years the Christmas story has inspired artists to create some of their finest works. This holiday season the Museum illustrates the story with European sculpture, master prints and books from the 14th through the 19th centuries. The works displayed have all been reproduced in "A Christmas Book," a recent publication by Eleanor Sayre of the Museum's print department. The exhibition will be on view in the book corridor through Jan. 8.

To help celebrate Christmas at the Museum, an 18th century Italian creche, consisting of 24 colorful terra cotta figures, will be placed on view in the Recent Acquisitions Gallery from Dec. 13 through Jan. 8.

Solutions to gift shopping as well as holiday entertainments problems can be solved at the Museum. On display are innumerable items based on objects in the Museum's collections, including reproductions of paintings, sculpture, decorative tiles and crewel embroidery designs.

Other suggestions include jewelry, greeting cards, nap paper, coloring books and even jig-saw puzzles. Illustrated art books are also available.

VA Warns Pensioners

The Veterans Administration today warned veterans and dependents of deceased veterans on VA nonservice-connected pension rolls that they run the risk of having their monthly payments discontinued if they fail to return the income questionnaire forms mailed with the November pension checks.

They may even have to pay back the money received in 1966, VA said.

They must return the income

The VA is required by law to obtain this income report each year because pensions are paid only to those whose incomes from other sources are below certain limits.

The VA asks that the card not be folded or mutilated because it

Board Tools Up For Action

(A TOWNSMAN News Feature)

Twice a month, for almost a year, nine men and two women have been meeting in Boston to breathe life into the Legislative Act of 1965 which created a State Board of Education "to support, serve and plan general education in the public schools."

The board is virtually tooled up for action - it has filled all but one of five new administrative posts - and is ready to proceed with ticking off items on the list of some 20 obligations it has been delegated.

Now, says John S. Sullivan of Andover, one of the 11, "We must start shooting at equality of quality education in Massachusetts." His phraseology is apt for the new state board has some big guns to fire. Unlike its predecessor, it can do more than recommend and plead. It has the legal power to set educational standards and insist that they be adopted by the network of highly independent municipal school systems that function within the Commonwealth.

The board has flexed its muscles just twice since it organized under the chairmanship of William G. Saltonstall in February, 1966. It has withheld state aid from the City of Boston because of the failure of school officials there to propose an acceptable solution to the urban problem of racial imbalance.

And it has handed down one edict of broad significance, by simply setting minimum standards for the length of the school day and the school year, the board has moved a step toward equality of educational opportunity. Andover was not affected when the ruling became mandatory this fall because the school day here was lengthened a year or so earlier. But the standard has added an average of 16 minutes a day to school schedules elsewhere, totaling a dramatic increase in educational time for those systems that were way below the minimum. Pointing to the situation which prompted board action, Sullivan explains that some communities were operating elementary schools for just four hours daily and secondary schools only a half hour longer.

When the Board met for its first session, it re-appointed Owen E. Kiernan state commissioner of education. This was no mere formality. The board evaluated Kiernan's past performance, took his familiarity with Massachusetts' schools into account and considered how they thought he would function as the head of a new five-man administrative force. Only then, was Kiernan re-hired.

At the suggestion of Andover's Mr. Sullivan, one of the only two board members who have had school committee experience, the educational policymakers decided to put their organizational house in order rather than try to solve problems without the benefit of advice from the bevy of deputy, assistant and associate commissioners authorized by the General Court. (All but one of these key people has now been hired.)

Then, after looking over the long list of "do's" in the new education law, the board agreed that there was one move they could make without further consultation: it was then that they determined to set standards for the length of the school year and day.

Top priority numbers have since been given to two other items the board considers of prime importance. Commissioner Kiernan has been asked to prepare recommendations for an early decision on the question of kindergartens - shall they be made mandatory? And the board is close to a ruling on pupil-teacher ratios.

Sullivan reports that Kiernan has a Task Force looking into the kindergarten question which poses a number of problems, the major one being expense. It looks now as though the board will finally require kindergartens for all communities, but make attendance optional. When the regulation is imposed, it is almost certain to stipulate a final enforcement date well in the future, giving School Committees an opportunity to make both space and staff available for what will be a new addition to many Commonwealth school systems.

Similar factors have to be considered in the timing of a regulation on pupil-teacher ratios. What impact will such a requirement have on school construction and the overall figure for professional salaries? And equally significant, will there be a sufficient number of teachers available to fill the added classrooms?

These questions are among those Kiernan and his staff must answer.

The department the Board of Education oversees now has five divisions: curriculum and instruction; administration and personnel; research and development; school

College Has Computer

Merrimack College has a new acquisition on its campus, an IBM 1130 Computing System. The 1130, which is located in Tagastan Hall, is an advanced stored-program computer system designed for use in engineering, research, management science, and business applications through a wide range of system configurations.

The computer is card based with a high speed core memory which allows it to store over 8,000 words. An auxiliary random access disk has a capacity for storing over a half million words, along with a monitor, controlling the input/output of problem programs. The system configuration includes a 1627 online plotter for graphic output.

Joseph A. Pavelcak, assistant professor of mathematics at Merrimack, who has been named as director of the new College Computer Center, foresees large usage of the computer by the Greater-Lawrence community for business, organizational, school and government programs.

Merrimack's 1130 will be used primarily for educational purposes. Presently, it is used by students and faculty in mathematics and engineering. Merrimack offers courses in programming for the scientifically or business orientated student. The college's part-time division has also added a course in Computer Programming and Numerical Analysis to their evening school offerings.

HOLIDAY LUNCH

The King's Daughters will meet at 1 p.m. Dec. 12 for a Christmas luncheon in Fellowship Hall at South Church. The hospital committee is in charge.

Sullivan Aboard USS Forrestal

Navy Lieutenant Commander Richard M. Sullivan Jr., son of Mr. and Mrs. Richard M. Sullivan of 181 Lowell St., was stationed as a crewmember aboard the attack aircraft carrier USS Forrestal when she again came to life after 198 days of renovation at the Norfolk Naval Shipyards in Portsmouth, Va.

On Oct. 31, the Forrestal reached a milestone in her overhaul. After seven months of silence, the first of her three boilers was lighted and began producing steam for the ship.

The significance of the major overhaul is to transform the Forrestal into the most modern warship in the Navy.

Churchman Urges State
Civil Service Reform

A prominent Bay State church leader charged Wednesday that "the present State Civil Service system is in need of reform that won't come until there is pressure from the citizenry."

The Rev. Dr. Alfred B. Minyard, executive director of the Churchman's League for Civil Welfare, was one of the speakers at the League's 72nd annual luncheon Program held at Old West Methodist Church, Boston.

Dr. Minyard revealed that the League would "greatly step-up our efforts in the coming year to get churchmen everywhere involving themselves more responsibly in the crucial proceeds of government."

Clergy and lay leaders from all parts of the state attended the luncheon gathering, which included an election of officers.

Dr. Minyard pointed out that, "The recent election has greatly stimulated the governmental reform movement which has been underway in recent years."

He emphasized these three points in his call for action: (1) We must continuously urge those who govern us to put the common good above the desire to develop purely partisan issues for the sake of issues. We must encourage them to rise above stubborn adherence to traditional party-lines and adapt their program to the changing dynamics and needs of society.

(2) As the wealth of our state enables it to respond to the needs of its citizens with increasing services, we of the church ought to be concerned with the quality of that service. Our tax dollars will not accomplish their purpose if the Civil Service system which administers public programs is made inferior by political interferences which prevent the development of a true merit system.

(3) As those who hold and teach moral values which have proven essential to a free society, churchmen must speak out for morality in government. As public programs expand, so do the opportunities for graft and corruption. We must find ways to deal effectively with dishonest politicians without unintentionally casting a shadow on the many dedicated public servants who deserve our encouragement and support.

ITS NOT IN THE CURRICULUM, but Simmons College students enjoying a holiday and looking forward to the Eastern Dog Club show are from left, Bridget Parson of Andover, Joanne Bricker and Christine Stawicki with Pointer, Webb-wold's Wheeler of Woodcock, owned by John G. Webb of Concord. The show and obedience trials will be held on Saturday, Dec. 17 in the War Memorial Auditorium at the Prudential Center in Boston.

Eastern Club Show To Draw 1800 Dogs

The largest number and variety of canines ever assembled under one roof in New England will be exhibited for dog lovers at the annual Eastern Dog Club show and obedience trials Saturday, Dec. 17, in War Memorial Auditorium at the Prudential Center in Boston.

Nearly 1800 canines, representing 110 breeds or variety of breeds recognized by the American Kennel Club, will be benched at the blue ribbon event, among the top ten dog shows in the country.

Starting at 9 a.m. with breed and obedience judging, the show will continue throughout the day with demonstrations and junior showmanship competition being added to the schedule in the afternoon. Group judging will start early in the evening and the Best-In-Show will be selected at 10 p.m. When not parading before the judges in the show rings, all of the competitors may be seen on the benches in the spacious exhibition floor area of the auditorium.

The obedience trials will be conducted by the New England Dog Training Club in five classes: Novice A and B, Open A and B and Utility.

Handlers of the future will get their opportunity to display talents in the Junior Showmanship Competition, which will be contested in Novice, Open A and Open B divisions.

From the pocket-sized poodles to the massive hounds too large for the living room, every dog has a chance for the top honors. The same rules apply to all: Be the best in the breed, prevail in the group competition and then be the best of the six finalists from which the judge must select the one to win the best-in-show award.

U. S. Air Force First Lieutenant Charles W. Smyth Jr., son of Mr. and Mrs. Charles W. Smyth of 117 Lowell St., has flown more than 57 combat missions since his arrival in Southeast Asia for Vietnam action.

Lieutenant Smyth flies the F-4C Phantom II fighter-bomber from a forward combat base to help maintain an around-the-clock harassment of Vietcong supply lines and storage areas.

The lieutenant is assigned to the only USAF unit credited with six Communist MIG aircraft "kills" in air-to-air combat in Southeast Asia. His organization has recorded more than 15,000 combat missions since last December.

The lieutenant, a 1960 graduate of Andover High School, received his BS degree from the U. S. Air Force Academy and was commissioned there in 1964.

His wife, Judith, is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Harold A. Bauld of 12 Pleasant St., Fayville, Mass.

Five volunteers from the Merrimack Valley Chapter are attending a March of Dimes National Volunteer Leadership Conference in New York City this week.

During the three-day conference, chapter leaders from across the nation will hear reports from some of the best minds of science and medicine.

The purpose of the national conference is to keep volunteer leaders abreast of the rapid progress being made by the March of Dimes in the fight against birth defects.

Each year more than 250,000 American babies are born with significant mental or physical defects. The March of Dimes is fighting birth defects through programs of public education, research, and treatment, and support a nationwide network of 77 birth defect treatment and evaluation centers.

Among highlights of the conference will be a reception at the United Nations honoring March of Dimes volunteers to be given by the United States Mission.

Worth Pre-Thinking?

The public complaint of a Shawsheen resident about recent emissions of industrial soot in the Village opens the door for a more general discussion of the subject of air pollution in Andover.

If you bring it up verbally, as this editor has, you are almost certain to be told that your concern is premature. Andover is a long way from having to give serious consideration to the purity of the country air it breathes.

How is it then that Andover was shrouded in a thick blanket of smog earlier this month when even more oppressive layers of stagnant air were overhanging both New York and Boston metropolitan districts?

Andover has relatively few problems with industrially polluted air; those it has tend to be sporadic.

What seems a greater threat to the quality of the air we breathe is the use of backyard incinerators for disposal of household debris. The oil drum trash can is a convenience to a great many Andover residents — it is a fast, efficient and economical way to get rid of the daily accumulation of cartons and papers and circulars that collect in the modern home.

But as the town continues to grow and incinerators proliferate, the question of just how much dirt they release into the air must be raised. If they do or can be expected to add appreciably to the wastes released into the air from autos, industry etc., then this fact should be taken into consideration in the scheduling of plans for municipal trash collection.

The manager said last week, in response to a query from Selectman White, that he has been thinking of recommending a combined trash and garbage collection service within the year.

The potential dangers from air pollution could turn out to be the most persuasive argument in support of such a costly venture.

Nettling News

Massachusetts auto owners have been dutifully swallowing insurance rate increases over the years with the same air of resignation assumed by practical little boys of the 30's when they saw mother approaching with the castor oil. There was little point in squawking . . . and some comfort in knowing that the foul tasting brew was frequently good for what ailed them.

Commonwealth drivers can take no such comfort from the bitter insurance pill they are force fed, however. They know by now that compulsory insurance is no sure cure for highway mayhem.

Consequently they can, and should feel free to protest the inequitable vehicle insurance rates that have resulted from the high cost of investigating claims and settling civil suits in court and from public abuse of the financial protection given under State Law.

Pressure is building for revision of the auto insurance formula. The news that rates will advance another six percent in 1967 has intensified the Legislature's interest, making it a prime time for car owners to let Representatives and Senators know that further delays in action cannot be tolerated.

On the face of it, the Governor's proposal for a "financial responsibility" law does not seem to be the answer. Though the plan would hold all drivers financially responsible for accidents they cause, it would make insurance optional. Critics of this suggestion feel the motorist most in need of insurance would be inclined to gamble on doing without it, which seems a logical and not unduly cynical argument.

Other measures are finding their way into the hopper for the up-coming session of the General Court and they deserve immediate and searching attention.

Meanwhile lawmakers should be made painfully aware that it nettles Massachusetts drivers to hear that they could pay as much as 50 percent less for auto insurance if they lived elsewhere in the U.S.

What Our Readers Say

To the Editor of the TOWNSMAN
Certainly the most recent Town Meeting was a vast improvement over the previous one. We must, however, remember that it resolved only one of the questions created by the earlier fiasco.

Our selectmen are still struggling with the problem of what to do with their power to acquire Andover's biggest eyesore, the gutted Tyer Rubber Warehouse. Unfortunately they allowed the Town to take a hasty vote on an ill-conceived motion and now they may be stuck with it, because that motion, as I remember it, clearly called for acquisition of all the property.

God Bless Us,—Everyone!

Surprising News!

Grackle Commonest Bird East Of The Mississippi

While the robin and wren may be the commonest birds in literature, their numbers fall behind other species in the outdoors. The 1966 breeding census of land birds in the eastern states and Canadian Maritimes ranked the robin a poor fifth — its numbers at even less than half the total of the fourth-ranked bird. The wren never approached the ten commonest species list.

That the grackle won out as commonest bird east of the Mississippi River was surprising only because most observers probably would have ranked the starling ahead of it. The starling finished second.

The statistics ranking the ten commonest birds — there are some surprises in the list — were collected this summer in a new breeding bird survey. The survey will spread westward soon, but this year it encompassed only 26 eastern states and four Canadian provinces. The 1966 survey broadens the field for a census technique developed the previous year in Maryland and Delaware by the U. S. Bureau of Sport Fisheries and Wildlife.

Some 585 survey routes were traveled by the census takers. In the total count, surveyors recorded 274 species of birds.

The species that probably will surprise New England birders by taking a position among the ten most common birds is the cardinal. These red birds have been spreading across Rhode Island and Massachusetts in the last decade and filtering into New Hampshire. But, despite the fact that 1041 cardinals were reported in Massachusetts last February in the annual cardinal-tufted titmice census, they could not be considered common birds in New England.

The count on common birds

I believe the Town's interest would now be best served if the selectmen were to re-study this entire question and present us at the next Town Meeting with a comprehensive program for providing Town Offices and Police and Fire Department facilities. We would then have an opportunity to vote on an acquisition proposal that would include both the estimated cost and the proposed uses of the property. As it now stands, we voted to acquire a parcel of land for purposes unknown.

Possibly the open town meeting form of government should continue on the theory that "two votes are better than one" because the facts are better stated the second time around.

S. Leonard Kent
57 Salem St.

To the Editor of the TOWNSMAN:
Now that the public school teachers are organized and claim that they have a right to take part in the management aspects of their superiors, how long before the indicates a rather wide disparity between the first four species and the next six. The score:

Grackle, 49,740 birds; starling, 48,676; house (English) sparrow, 48,238; red-winged blackbird, 46,612; robin, 20,661; crow, 16,657; bobwhite, 14,623; meadow-lark, 14,493; cardinal, 12,749, and mourning dove, 12,431.

Among surprising omissions was the blue jay. One might have supposed that the bird's commonness in New England alone would have squeezed it into the list ahead of the crow. In fact, one might suspect that the size of the crow and its obviousness — although, admittedly, it is not too obvious during the breeding season — may have contributed to a disproportionate number of reports on its presence.

The most discouraging reports from the survey concerned hawks. All species of these birds of prey seem to be following the peregrine falcon toward oblivion. From western New York and northwestern Pennsylvania came reports of no known successful nests of red-shouldered hawks; no marsh hawks, almost no sparrow hawks; no known sharp-shinned hawks and no nests of broad-winged hawks found.

The National Audubon Society and U. S. Bureau of Sport Fisheries and Wildlife survey noted that in all states east of the Rockies, except West Virginia, census results "all seem to agree these birds (hawks) are becoming steadily scarcer."

While conclusive proof may be lacking, there has been enough analysis of dead birds and unhatched eggs to indicate that modern pesticides probably is the added factor that has weighted the scales against survival of these birds of prey.

pupils, seeing the example set, shall organize and then insist that they have a right to tell the teachers how to teach them and what their subjects and schedules should be?

It would seem that at least teachers ought to know when an idea is carried to an absurdity!

Down the Years

75 Years Ago — December, 1891

The Selectmen at their meeting Monday appointed Milo H. Gould, superintendent of the Almshouse, to serve out the term of the late Walter B. Allen, which lasts until next April. Frank Upton who is employed at the Almshouse and Milo Gould were also appointed police officers without pay.

Lawrence elected a Democratic Mayor and again went for license. The most sanguine friends of no license hardly dared hoped for success, but they made a great fight and the small margin of 184 for rum shows how near they came to success.

The Andover Bargain Parlor is the name of a new business to be opened in the Bank Building about Dec. 15, in the room formerly occupied by W. E. Stratton. Goods will be received direct from manufacturers, consisting of fine printed and white dress cottons in second quality and remnants, also lace curtains of light imperfections and remnants. Mr. William Chamley is to open this store.

50 Years Ago — December, 1916

The grade teachers in the public schools have felt the pinch of the high cost of living and Tuesday night at the meeting of the School Committee, a petition was presented signed by all the grade teachers asking for an increase of pay — the first time in the history of the local schools that such action has been taken by the teachers concertedly.

Mr. and Mrs. William Banfield who have been located in Lawrence for the past three years will return to Andover again on January first and will take the rooms over Whiting's store, recently vacated by Dr. E. D. Lane.

Miss Daisy I. Barrett held a very successful sale yesterday afternoon in the Ames store. Braided rugs, dainty hand-made articles of many kinds, baskets etc. were sold for Christmas gifts.

William M. Wood has bought the farm on Argilla Road owned by Charles Jameson. The many friends of Mr. and Mrs. Jameson will be pleased to know that they will remain on the old homestead.

The friends of Miss Ada Shaw in the Osgood district will give her a house warming Saturday evening in her new home.

25 Years Ago — December, 1941

Almost all of Andover had been expecting war to break out momentarily for more than a week; the less sanguine among them had been awaiting its arrival for about a month; active interventionists had been planning for it for more than a year. The nature of the attack, however, left Andover as stunned and as much off-guard as the rest of the nation.

The local defense committee issued a call to all able-bodied citizens of Andover to register at the town hall for whatever emergency service may be required.

Branford Holt, son of Mr. and Mrs. Herbert W. Holt of South Main Street, recently enrolled as a freshman in the second section at Northeastern University.

Miss Helen Beer, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Arthur J. Beer of 3 Summer St., was recently elected president of the senior class at Boston University's Sargent College of Physical Education.

A surprise party for Mr. and Mrs. Richard Wrigley was held last Wednesday evening in the Lawrence state armory by Pvt. Wrigley's fellow members of Company D, of the State Guard.

Little Jackie Croteau celebrated his first birthday with a small party at his home on High Plain Road Sunday afternoon.

10 Years Ago — December, 1956

A dead skunk at Main and Morton Streets and another animal fatality on Elm Street took the spotlight at Monday's Selectmen's meeting. Memories of the lingering odor, plus complaints that no one would haul away the carcass from Elm Street over the weekend, brought immediate action from the board. They voted to ask the police department to be responsible for disposing of dead animals for the immediate future.

Dino Valz will continue with his travel talk, begun last week at Memorial Hall Library, on the subject of Switzerland.

Donald W. Bacon, 35 Lucerne Dr., has been appointed regional commissioner of internal revenue for all New England.

(It incorporates the old School Building Assistance Commission which previously functioned as an independent agency.) The heads of these divisions report to Kiernan.

Other Duties

Beyond the areas with which the Board has already concerned itself, these are among the jobs the Legislature has given the laymen.

• The board shall be a communication and information center serving all public schools in the commonwealth.

• The board may provide such necessary services to local public schools as are beyond their capacity to support separately.

• The board shall provide centralized, state wide, long-range planning service for public schools.

• The board shall provide a common center for the development evaluation and adaptation educational innovations for public schools.

• The board shall delineate and locate such other support services so as to improve the operation of all public schools and the quality of their educational programs.

• The board shall establish minimum length for a school year and the minimum number of days the school year.

• The board shall approve educational standards for approval for professional personnel in public schools.

• The board shall establish maximum pupil-teacher ratios in public elementary and secondary schools.

• The board shall establish permissible and mandatory attendance for school attendance and shall consider the advisability of raising the minimum age for attendance to the first grade to the national average "age" for such attendance.

• The board shall establish minimum educational standards

ELEVEN CHILDREN TOO MANY are crowded into this classroom at West Elementary School. The Andover School Committee has adopted the Willis-Harrington Commission standard of 25 as the maximum number of elementary pupils who should be in a single classroom with a single teacher. There are 36 youngsters at work in this West School class.

BOARD TOOLS UP

facilities and related services; and state and federal assistance.
(It incorporates the old School Building Assistance Commission which previously functioned as an independent agency.) The heads of these divisions report to Kiernan.

Other Duties

Beyond the areas with which the Board has already concerned itself, these are among the jobs the Legislature has given the laymen:

- The board shall be a communication and information center serving all public schools in the commonwealth.

- The board may provide such necessary services to local public schools as are beyond their capacity to support separately.

- The board shall provide centralized, state wide, long-range planning service for public schools.

- The board shall provide a common center for the development evaluation and adaptation of educational innovations for public schools.

- The board shall delineate and locate such other supporting services so as to improve the operation of all public schools and the quality of their educational programs.

- The board shall establish the minimum length for a school day and the minimum number of days the school year.

- The board shall approve the educational standards for appointments for professional personnel in public schools.

- The board shall establish maximum pupil-teacher ratios for classes in public elementary and secondary schools.

- The board shall establish the permissible and mandatory ages for school attendance and shall consider the advisability of raising the minimum age for attendance in the first grade to the national average "age" for such attendance.

- The board shall establish minimum educational standards for all courses which public schools require their students to take.

- The board shall establish minimum standards for all public school buildings, subject to the provisions of section fifteen of chapter one hundred and forty-three.

- The board shall evaluate annually the efficacy of the state aid formula and shall recommend such changes in it as it may deem necessary.

- The board may withhold state and federal funds from school committees which fail to comply with the provisions of law relative to the operation of the public schools or any regulation of said board authorized in this section.

Small wonder that the board is meeting two days a month, one day more than the law requires. But members expect to trim this schedule once the board has fully cleared the organizational hump.

Involvement with the racial imbalance law has made heavy inroads in the new board's time, Sullivan said last week in discussing its activities. He estimates that at least 20 percent of the board's man hours have been devoted to trying to work out solutions to problems created by the state civil rights law directed at eliminating educational deficiencies related to racial imbalance. The school board has been given responsibility for approving or disapproving the plans and progress of school systems affected.

Another project that will take more time in 1967 than the board gave it in 1966 - the tooting of its own horn. Members find they may need to be more politically minded than they first supposed when they came on duty with what was regarded as something of a mandate for action.

But in the board's view, neither the Governor nor the Legislature protected its interests sufficiently at budget time last term. Consequently, the board will go further to explain its positions the next time around.

Mr. and Mrs. Robert V. Deyermund, 91 Elm St. were recent visitors in the antique home of Mr. and Mrs. David Markert in Hardwick.

The Markert's 14-room house was built in 1735.

Mr. Deyermund reports that the Quabin Dam is low, but deer plentiful in the reservation. He personally spotted a doe with three young ones.

Tickets are available for a Christmas Concert to be played on the organ at Hammond Museum, Hesperus Ave., Gloucester on Sunday at 7 p.m. They may be reserved by telephone or by mail.

Featuring an underwater quest for adventure, Stan Waterman will present "Man Looks To The Sea" in the 50th Memorial Moses Greely Parker Series, Sunday, Dec. 11, 3 p.m. This is an all color film presentation. Stan Waterman's films have appeared on television and one of his undersea films was honored as a "Classic" at the 1963 International Underwater Film Festival. "Man Looks To The Sea" shows divers risking their lives in the blue depths of the Pacific to harvest the black coral and the attack patterns of the sharks, spectacularly photographed from an alarming distance of only eight feet. Also depicted is a diver as he "tickles" an octopus out of its den and has a wild wrestling match with this timid, but tenacious monster of the deep.

Merrimack Ladies Plan January Film Premiere

A premiere showing of "Is Paris Burning?" will be the 1966-67 fund raising project for the Ladies of Merrimack College. It was announced by officers and members of the board.

The opening night premiere of the film is scheduled for Wednesday evening, Jan. 18, 1967, at the Showcase Cinema in Lawrence. Proceeds from the annual fund raiser are earmarked for Merrimack College's new library now under construction at the North Andover campus. In the past three years alone, the Ladies of Merrimack have enriched the library fund by over $25,000.

"Is Paris Burning?" is based on the best selling book by the same name. Its authors are Larry Collins and Dominique Lapierre. They used the actual experience of 536 persons, perused thousands of official records in several languages, and unearthed secret films to add detail to their narrative.

Co-chairmen for the premiere are Mrs. John J. Neary Jr., Salem, Mass., and Mrs. Euclydia Gaudreau of Haverhill.

The Andover-No. Andover chairman is Mrs. James A. Barry, who is assisted by Mrs. William Crawford Jr., Mrs. James Form, Mrs. Angelo Zappala, Mrs. Abigail Bradley and Atty. Helen Comeau.

Tickets for the film may be purchased from area chairman or at Merrimack College.

Athenian Summer Set For Secondary Students

Greece, both ancient and modern, will come alive for some one hundred students from both independent and public secondary schools when they spend an Athenian Summer in Athens under the sponsorship of Pierce College.

This new approach to international understanding, under the direction of Georgia Theophilis Noble, assistant professor of education at Simmons College, is planned for both boys and girls between 16 and 18.

The six-week program will be on the new Pierce College campus on Mount Hymettus at Aghia Paraskevi. Young Athenians and Americans will have an opportunity to meet, study, talk, and to share recreational facilities. There will be concerts and plays at the Athens Festival, museum trips, and extensive travel throughout Greece. A sports program will include swimming, tennis, basketball, and Greek folk dancing.

The curriculum will include Modern Greek Conversation, Greek Literature in Translation, Greek History, Classical Art, and English Conversation. Prominent Athenians, as well as alumnae and Greek friends of Pierce, will take part in informal discussions with the students.

Pierce College, now in its ninety-first year, was founded in Smyrna as the American Collegiate Institute and has many alumnae in the United States. The college has a distinguished Board of Trustees and a special board of advisers has been appointed for the summer program. Mrs. Alexander Gram, who recently resigned as principal of Abbot Academy is on the board of advisers. She is currently interim principal of the high school division of Pierce College in Athens.

Further information may be obtained from Mrs. Georgia Noble at Simmons College in Boston.

Woodworth Permit OK'd For Village Body Shop

Woodworth Realty Inc. has been given a zoning variance and special building permit which will allow conversion of an office building at 8-10 Haverhill St. for use as an auto body and mechanical work shop.

In handing down its ruling, the Zoning Board of Appeals said it was clearing a variance to permit operation of the body shop within 300 feet of Sacred Heart School, primarily because Woodworth Motors Inc., has been operating within the same area since prior to adoption of local zoning bylaws. At a public hearing last October, Webster I. Woodworth told the ZBA that the realty firm has been unable to rent office space in the building, probably because of the lack of parking facilities.

He added that Woodworth would make no change in the exterior, except for an entrance to be created in the North end of the building where it faces the present Woodworth garage.

In their decision the Zoning Board said that in its opinion permitting the building conversion would not be detrimental to the neighborhood, and that to refuse it would create a hardship for the owner.

Follow other cars at a safe distance - and that means a longer distance on snowy or icy roads, warns Registrar Richard E. McLaughlin. Stopping distance can be cut by use of snow tires, and made even shorter by use of anti-skid tire chains. But even with tire chains, remember that it takes longer to stop on snow and ice than on dry pavement!

drawal from an active role in NATO as a case in point and speculated that NATO will eventually hold only ceremonial importance.

The former ambassador claimed that our foreign policy is now undergoing a period of change, although, he assured the PA audience "any change that is taking place in foreign policy will always be accompanied by a disavowal that any change is occurring". As examples of such change, he cited our relatively recent position of "practical accommodation" in eastern European countries such as U.S. support of the USSR's role in resolving the Pakistan-India crisis and joint efforts to control air pollution by atomic weapons.

He said that he personally hoped to see American foreign policy increasingly guided by principles of "pragmatic accommodation", and stressed that where people may criticize the U.S. for a decline in leadership in the world for such a course, we will in fact be returning to the realities of our position.

In summing up he said, "we have little leadership in circumstances where we are not needed and this is not an abrogation of leadership but an admirable accommodation."

Danton Awaiting Steel Shipment

John Davidson of Danton Realty Trust said Wednesday that his company will begin construction of a new commercial building on property adjacent to the Post Office in about five to six weeks, or upon delivery of structural steel.

Meanwhile, renovations to the old Killorin building will be underway to fit in with Danton's plans for development of the entire Killorin site.

The company will construct a traditional brick-on-masonry building on the frontage of the lot, which adjoins the municipal parking lot on Main Street. This building will be linked to the former Killorin Building, now moved to the rear of the property.

The project has been held up for some weeks while the Zoning Board of Appeals considered Danton's request for permission to incorporate additional apartments in the old building, in violation of zoning area requirements for residential use in the district involved.

Danton initially asked to add four apartments to the five already existing in the Killorin property. It later shaved this request by two, asking for a total of seven units.

The Zoning Board released a decision this week authorizing a variance to permit seven apartments. Since Danton's proximity to the municipal parking lot cuts into requirements for on-site parking, the developer can utilize more of the lot for construction than would otherwise be permissible.

Davidson reports that there will be three retail stores in the new
